

RESEARCH ON MINDSETS OF STUTTERING

Have you ever wondered what shapes your experience of stuttering? Researchers at Michigan State University want to answer that question too by exploring mindsets, or the thoughts, beliefs, and expectations, a person has to their reactions to stuttering. We are seeking adults who stutter to complete a set of online surveys of mindsets and their experience of stuttering. We are also piloting an intervention aimed to change mindsets of stuttering.

If you are 18 years of age or old, currently consider yourself to be a person who stutters, reside in the United States, and have never taken part in a mindset intervention, consider taking part in our study!

This study includes two sets of online surveys, both of which take will approximately 10 minutes to complete. You will be compensated in the form of a $5 online gift card for the first set of surveys and a $10 online gift card for the second set of surveys.

Additionally, you will have the option to pilot an online intervention focused on changing reactions to stuttering after completing both sets of online surveys. This intervention is FREE and you will be compensated with an additional $20 online gift card.

If you are interested in further information on either the survey study or intervention, please contact Megan Arney, a PhD candidate arneymeg@msu.edu

To go ahead and take our surveys, follow the link or QR code below:

https://msu.co1.qualtrics.com/jfe/form/SV_3kmvC3abR5VM050

